Press Release Database Management website

This website allows the users share and manage their companies press releases. And you will be using MVC pattern to separate your codes. Using object-oriented approach to design your classes in Model. And you will need to use session or cookies to manage a session.

Steps of Creating this website

1. Based on the requirements, design your database tables and their relationship.
2. Code Model classes and Repository classes
3. Design and code controller(s) and actions
4. Design and code views.

Application Features:

1. Web Form to submit a Press Release with these fields:
    a. Headline - required
    b. Summary - required
    c. News body - required
    d. Company Name - required
    e. Company email - required
    f. Release date - required
2. Requires user to first create an account before allowed to submit a Press Release using these fields:
    a. Username - required
    b. Password (ask them to type the password twice for security) - required
    c. City - required
    d. State - required
    e. Country - not required
    f. Admin(Yes/No) checkbox - not required
3. Everyone can view press releases without logging in
4. Only author or Admin can edit press releases
5. Only author or Admin can delete press releases
6. Provide an ability to search Press Releases by "News body", "City", "State" or "Country"
7. Press Release may include an image to be displayed when viewed if a link to an external image URL has been provided.
8. Sort Press Release by date submitted, author, and city.
9. Account admin page for "user" where they can change their password, view list of press releases they submitted, delete and make edits.

Headline : Whats app sold to Facebook
Suddenly, I began to experience that same feeling that I got when I bought a red AMC Pacer Wagon and suddenly it seemed like they were everywhere on the road. Were there really more of them, or was I just noticing it more because now I owned one?
